This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. HISTORY AND AIM OF THE SCHOOL.

The Public Latin School in Boston was established five years after the settlement of the city, and more than a year before the founding of Harvard College. We learn from the records that "on the 13th of the 2d moneth, 1635, . . . Att a Generall meeting upon publique notice . . . it was . . . generally agreed upon that our brother Philemon Pormort shalbe intreated to become schole-master for the teaching and noutering of children with us." It seems highly probable that it owes its origin to Reverend John Cotton, the minister of the First Church, who came from Boston, England, in 1633, where there was a similar school established by a grant from Queen Mary in 1554. It was known from the first as the "Free schoole," receiving its support from the town. We find mention made at an early date of collecting rents on "Deare Island, Long Island, and Spectacle Island due to the use of ye Schoole."

During the early years of the Revolution the school was under the charge of John Lovell, a stanch loyalist, who sailed away with the British, when they evacuated Boston in March 1776, while his son James, his assistant, an equally stanch patriot, remained. One of the pupils of that day reports that on the morning of the 19th of April, 1775, Master Lovell announced, as he dismissed school: "War's begun, and school's done; deponite libros." Within a very few months after his departure the school was re-opened under a new teacher.

Among its many efficient masters it is worthy of note that in each century there has been one who has had a remarkably long connection with the school.

Ezechiell Cheevers, .	1670–1708
John Lovell, . . .	1730–1776
Francis Gardner, . .	1831–1876

The original building stood on School street—hence the name—in the rear of King's Chapel, near the Franklin statue. In 1748, by vote of a "tumultuous town-meeting," another building was erected on the other side of the street, where the Parker House now stands. This was replaced by a new structure in 1812, which the school continued to use till its transfer to Bedford street in 1844. Its removal to the spacious and convenient building on the corner of Dartmouth street and Warren avenue occurred in January, 1881.

The object of the school is to prepare boys to enter college, and parents are expected to signify their intention to give their sons a collegiate education. This object, of necessity, shapes its course of study and its character. It is not a finishing school, preparing boys for business life, as do our High Schools, and therefore some studies, pursued in the latter, may profitably be reserved for the more extended opportunities of the college course. It is a preparatory school—pure and simple—aiming to graduate boys who are ready to enter our leading colleges.

From its vicinity to Harvard, and its early historical connection with it, the course of study, as arranged by the School Board, has particular reference to that university. Two marked features in the requirements for admission to college, introduced within a few years, should be noticed,—the increased emphasis laid upon the special study of the English language and literature, and the stress laid upon the student's ability to translate the classics at sight into good English. To meet the first requirement three hours a week in each class are devoted to the study of English, and this fact should allay the apprehensions of those who fear that the claims of the mother-tongue will be sacrificed in favor of the ancient languages and mathematics. To meet the second requirement the methods of instruction have been changed, with the aim, not so much to secure proficiency in the technicalities of grammar, as to attain readiness in comprehending the meaning of an author, and expressing it in idiomatic English. Past methods of instruction have too often resulted in an accurate and grammatical rendering of good Latin into bad English. To lead students to understand and convey to others the meaning, aim, and spirit of an author; to grasp a language in its literary rather than its literal features; to seize the spirit rather than the letter, is the object of the present methods of instruction.

To reach the end in view we cannot insist too strongly on the need of an early start and a steady continuance in the course of study as prepared by the School Board. Boys ought to enter the Latin School as soon as they are ready to "pass an examination equivalent to that required for admission to the third class of the Grammar Schools." (See page 21.) Under the old system, instructors were agreed that boys ought to commence the study of Latin at an early age. How much more true is this now, when the methods of teaching the classics resemble so closely those employed in teaching the modern languages, in regard to which all are agreed, both in theory and practice, that it is of primary importance to commence early. The forms, phrases, and idioms of a language are acquired much more readily, naturally, and effectively than later in life. Boys ought to take the full course in order to lay thorough foundations, and become well acquainted with the ancient languages and the authors studied. While in exceptional cases the course has been completed in less than six years, it remains true that, for the majority of boys, steady and long-continued application is necessary. A knowledge of facts and technicalities can be acquired in a comparatively short time by cramming; but a proper appreciation of and acquaintance with the writers of antiquity can only result from a full, well-rounded course of study. Even those who succeed in answering the demands of the colleges after short courses in preparatory schools, feel a lack which subsequent study does not always repair.

GRADUATES OF 1884.

The graduating class of 1884 consisted of thirty pupils. Diplomas were awarded by the School Committee to all of them.

Twenty-five of them enter Harvard College; one, Trinity; one, Boston University; one studies medicine; one studies music, and one enters upon business for the present.

The twenty-five candidates for admission to Harvard College passed with two "conditions" and "with credit" as follows:

REGULATIONS OF THE PUBLIC LATIN SCHOOL.

SECTION. 265. The purpose of this school is to give a thorough general culture to boys who intend to pursue the higher branches of learning, or to prepare for college.

SECT. 266. The school shall be organized in six classes, and the full course of study shall be for six years.

SECT. 268. Graduates of the Grammar Schools to whom diplomas have been awarded shall be admitted, without examination, to such advanced classes as their qualifications may entitle them to enter. Other applicants for admission shall be at least eleven years of age, and shall present certificates of character from the principals of the schools they last attended, and pass an examination equivalent to that required for admission to the third class of the Grammar Schools,* on the third Saturday in June, and on the first Monday in September, the questions for such examinations to be adopted by the Board of Supervisors, and approved by the Committee on examinations. Candidates for admission to the Latin School must present a written statement from parents or guardians of their intention to give such candidate a collegiate education.

SECT. 269. The Board of Supervisors shall examine the graduating class each year; and the standard of examination shall be that of admission to colleges of the highest grade. Pupils who have completed the course of study to the satisfaction of the Committee on Examinations shall be entitled to a diploma.

*These requirements for admission to the school include a knowledge of Arithmetic through Common and Decimal Fractions; Mathematical and Physical Geography, as treated in Warren's Common School Geography, Part I; ability to read fluently simple English, to spell ordinary words, and to compose a short piece, as a letter to a friend. The Fall term begins on the first Monday in September. Non residents are required to pay a tuition fee of about ninety dollars a year.

PRIZES.

Two funds, one a gift of several Boston gentlemen in 1819, and the other given by the late Abbot Lawrence in 1845, permit an annual offer of prizes in books.

For the year ending May 30th. 1885, prizes are offered as follows:

I.

For Excellence in Classics.

To the pupil in each division of each class, whose record for the year is the highest in Latin, Greek, and Ancient History and Geography.

II.

For Excellence in Modern Studies.

To the pupil in each division who has the highest record in Mathematics, Natural Science, French, Modern History and Geography, English Language, Literature, and Composition, Reading and Spelling.

Note.—No pupil can receive a prize in both (I) and (II) the same year.

III.

For Excellence in Declamation.

One first prize, two second, and two third prizes.

IV.

For Excellence in Reading.

One first prize, two second, and two third prizes.

Note.—Declamation prizes are awarded upon the basis of marks given at public Declamations during the year, and of marks given by the judges at the Annual Prize Declamation. The marks of the year count as sixty per cent.

Reading prizes are given upon the basis of marks of the judges at the Annual Prize Reading.

V.

For Exemplary Conduct and Punctuality.

To the twelve pupils who have received the most approbation cards in the year.

Note.—These cards are given each week to all who have not been absent or tardy, or culpably imperfect in lessons, and who have received no marks for misdemeanors.

VI.

For Exemplary Conduct and Fidelity.

To one pupil in each division, selected by the instructors as conspicuous for faithful endeavor, regardless of mere rank in class.

VII.

For Original Written Exercises.

(1.) For an Essay in Latin of not less than 250 and not more than 320 words, on any subject.

(2.) For an English Poem on any subject.

(3.) For an English Essay on "The Secret of George Eliot's Power."

(4.) For a Poetical Translation of Vergil's Æneid, Book II., lines 630 to 705 inclusive.

Note.—Written exercises must be handed to the Head Master on or before May 1st. Each exercise must be on quarto-sized letter paper, on one side only of the paper, and must have a fictitious name attached. Books for reading may be suggested by friends of candidates, but no other assistance may be given except by teachers on request.

No exercise will be rewarded unless of sufficient merit to deserve a prize. No pupil can be a candidate for more than one prize in (VII.) In (III.), (IV.) and (VII.), no pupil can be a candidate for a prize for which he has before competed successfully.
